

Why are clinical research studies so important?

Without clinical research studies such as CREAD, new medications cannot be developed.

Thanks to the thousands of participants who take part in clinical research studies all over the world each year, we are able to test:

- Potential new medications
- New versions of medicines already being used
- New uses for medicines already being used

